ALISSE C. CAMAZINE

PAULE, CAMAZINE & BLUMENTHAL

ST. LOUIS

Alisse Camazine is a founding partner of Paule, Camazine & Blumenthal, which boasts the largest family law practice group in St. Louis that is part of a full-service firm, as well as the rare law firm in Missouri with a female name partner.

Camazine handles cases involving alcohol and drug use, mental health issues and complex property and custody arrangements, striving for a child-centered approach to family matters. Along with law partner Alan Freed, she co-authored “Divorce in Missouri,” a comprehensive guide on state divorce issues for non-lawyers.

She is a Fellow of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers, which has certified her as an arbitrator. She also is a past president of the St. Louis County Bar Association and a board member of Gateway to Hope, which helps low-income women with breast cancer.

In addition, she is a 2019 recipient of Missouri Lawyers Media’s ICON Award and a 2009 Women’s Justice Award winner for trial practice.

Camazine earned her law degree in 1979 from Saint Louis University.
